My head and throat ached so severely that I was obliged to keep quiet. Ely's Cream Balm was suggested. Within an hour from the first application I felt relieved the pain began to subside. In a few days I was entirely cured. (Price 50 ct.)

WHY IT CAN'T BE DONE.

If John A. Brooks, of Warrensburg, Mo., organizes his party he will take 50,000 democrats out of the old republican party. We have no malice towards Rev. John A. Brooks on that score. —St. Joseph Herald.

SOUTH AMERICAN STYLE.

It. W. Backley is writing interesting letters from South America to the Chillicothe Constitution. We extract as follows from his last letter from Montevideo, Uruguay, dated Dec. 24th:

On the streets, you see carts with very large wheels, (carriages and buggies are the only four wheeled vehicles seen), lottery ticket hawkers, boot blacks (who are also lottery ticket sellers), and the ordinary citizen with a bright-colored sash about his waist (which may conceal a knife), and with canvas slippers, with thick soles on his feet. His head gear is a cross between a turban and a Scotch cap. He invariably has a cigarette in his mouth. The gaucho ("rural rooster," so to speak), wears zuevas trousers.

The street cars go by at a fast trot, and do not stop to let any one off unless it is a woman or some one who cannot jump.

The stores are generally small, stock shows and not the best. The barber sells you shirts, under-wear and perfumery. He also removes sand off by machinery; a cylinder covered with bristles revolved by a belt, and the barber runs that machine over your head. You wash the soap off your face yourself.

Outside the city are the quintas (country seats). The grounds surrounding the quintas are walled in, and the iron gates kept locked. The grounds are laid out in gravelled walks, bordered with porcelain tiles, and the principal walks have light iron arches over which grape vines are trained. The walks are bordered by flowers. The spaces between the walks are devoted to fruits and garden vegetables. The house is usually of one story, the rooms large and airy, and has a veranda on one or more sides. The windows of the quintas are not large, the only exception I have seen. The walls of the grounds are sometimes covered with broken bottles to keep out undesirable visitors. The grounds of the better class of quintas are adorned with statues, fountains, and other pleasing objects.

Bull fights are held every Sunday. The bulls are killed here. I have not gone to any yet. There are several lotteries here; said to be dishonest. There are two or three markets here where you can get almost any thing you want, such as, needles, thread, birds (parrots, canaries, etc.), besides meat and vegetables.

I never saw such gaudy uniforms (not even in a band) as the soldiers here wear. The body of the short jacket is blue, the double breast is green, epaulettes yellow, red trousers, white leg caps, and I have lost track of the cap. Put all this on a darkey (most of the soldiers are darkeys) and the effect is somewhat ludicrous.

When a native wants something to eat, he kills and animals, cuts it up, bones it, leaving the hide out, and spits the large pieces. The spits are stuck in the ground inclining toward the center, with the hair out. A fire is started in the ring and the meat is broiled. The fire is now permitted to burn down, so as not to burn the hair, which is now turned in toward the fire. The slow fire is kept up until the meat is done. He now cuts off a large piece, takes it in his left hand and cuts off one bite at a time. If he can find any salad about, he eats that with his meat. By cooking the meat in that way, all the juices remain in it, as I can testify from actual attendance at a carne con cuero (meat with the hide on), as it is called.

THE BUTTER INTEREST.

There are 400 creameries in Illinois, 600 in Iowa and 300 in Wisconsin, and yet, notwithstanding the large number of factories where butter is made in the northwest alone, there is no excess of production; all the butter that is made is readily salable at good prices, and, indeed, it may be said that butter actually commands a higher price now than it did ten years ago, when there were few or no creameries in the west. The explanation of this rapid increase of city and town population in the country and that increasing demand for good butter which is one of the marks of prosperous and well-to-do civilized communities. Poor butter is a drug in the market. But the creameries do not make poor butter. The system on which they work prevents it. The cream they receive daily is made into butter daily, and this insures sweetness and freshness.

There are comparatively few—thirty or forty—creameries in Missouri, but others being established, and the active interest our people are taking in the subject gives assurance that in a few years Missouri will be one of the leading butter regions of the west. One important consideration may be earnestly pressed upon the attention of Missouri farmers in this connection—that the creamery interest has largely increased the value of farms in Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin, and the highest-priced farms in these states are to be found in the butter districts.—St. Louis Republican.

A Cat Legend.

"Do you know why cats always wash themselves after a meal?"

A cat caught a sparrow and was about to devour it when the sparrow said: "No gentleman eats till he has first washed his face." The cat was struck with this sage remark, said the sparrow, and began to wash his face with his paw. The sparrow flew away. This enraged pussy, and he swore: "As long as I live I will eat first and wash my face afterwards." And cats have done so ever since.—Cin. Inquirer.
